Maximilian specializes in white collar crime and compliance.

He advises and represents companies, executives and board members in all areas of white-collar criminal law, administrative offenses and corporate governance and compliance. He also conducts internal investigations and advises on the implementation and improvement of compliance management systems.

In addition to investigating and defending allegations of fraud, embezzlement and corruption, he has been extensively involved in asset recovery, money laundering prevention, management liability in connection with allegations of criminal conduct, as well as international financial sanctions (OFAC) and insolvency criminal law.

Advising companies, investors and entities in regulated industries on public law and regulatory issues is another focus of his practice.
