constantin.lauterwein@hengeler.com

Constantin advises and represents companies, executives and board members in all areas of white-collar criminal law, administrative offenses and corporate compliance.

His clients include entities, companies and their managers faced with government investigations or enforcement actions as well as businesses that have suffered damage caused by criminal conduct. He has extensive experience representing clients before prosecutors, regulators and courts.

The prevention of liability risks connected with business decisions in crisis situations is a key aspect of his practice.

He conducts and supports internal investigations and advises on the implementation and improvement of compliance programs.

In addition to investigating and defending cases concerning fraud, breach of fiduciary duty, tax evasion and corruption, in recent years he has been engaged in matters pertaining to product compliance and liability, international financial sanctions (OFAC), money laundering prevention as well as disputes related to management liability in connection with allegations of criminal conduct.
