Lisa advises and represents corporate clients from the communication, technology and media sector in information society law. She specializes in aspects of intellectual property law as well as media law, competition law and regulatory law and corresponding questions of German and European fundamental rights in this area.

She has a particular focus on litigation before public courts on the national and European level, and also represents clients in sector-specific regulatory proceedings before public authorities.

Lisa also advises clients on the structuring and negotiation of complex licensing contracts, in particular on questions of equitable remuneration.
